Re: Comments on Proposed Rescission of the 2001 Roadless Rule

To Whom It May Concern:

On behalf of the Environmental Law & Policy Center (ELPC), I am submitting the attached public comments collected from our supporters and constituents across the Midwest and beyond. In total, ELPC is submitting 563 comments from constituents in opposition to the proposed rescission of the 2001 Roadless Area Conservation Rule ("Roadless Rule").

The Roadless Rule has safeguarded 58 million acres of wild, undeveloped national forests for nearly 25 years, including 512,000 acres in the Midwest. These forests are essential for clean drinking water, wildlife habitat, recreation, and climate resilience. Americans are deeply concerned that repealing these protections would expose roadless areas to logging, mining, and road building, causing irreparable harm to some of our nation's last remaining wild forests.

We request that the U.S. Forest Service maintain the Roadless Rule and withdraw the proposed rescission.

Thank you for your consideration of these comments.

Sincerely,
Environmental Law & Policy Center

Letter to U.S. Agriculture Secretary Rollins

Secretary Rollins,

Please withdraw the proposal to rescind the Roadless Rule. Our National Forests belong to all of us. They are where we go to hike, they are the source of clean drinking water, and they provide habitat for wildlife. The Roadless Rule protects 45 million acres of remote, wild, and roadless forests across our country. These are the few pockets of unbroken forest where nature can flourish undisturbed. Since 2001, the Roadless Rule has protected the wild character of millions of acres of forests, including some of our nation's most cherished vistas, fishing holes, and hiking trails.

Our National Forests in the Midwest—including Wisconsin's Chequamegon-Nicolet National Forest; Michigan's Ottawa, Hiawatha, and Huron-Manistee National Forests; Illinois' Shawnee National Forest; and Minnesota's Superior and Chippewa National Forests—have important roadless areas that could lose protection if this action is finalized. These areas are an enormous resource for the recreation economy and our environment across the Midwest.

We shouldn't jeopardize the wildlife habitat, recreation, and clean water that the roadless areas in these forests provide. Please leave America's last wild forests alone. Leave the Roadless Rule in place.

Sincerely,

ELPC and the 563 attached constituent signers
